Media Update: May 2010

New President at the FTTH Council Europe

Chris Holden was appointed as the new President of the Board at the Council's General Assembly, which took place in Amsterdam on 21-22 April. Despite the travel disruption caused by volcanic ash, there was a good turnout for the meeting, with those members who could not travel taking part via telephone or internet link. Chris Holden has been a Board member since April 2009, and is also Marketing Manager, EMEA, at Corning Cable Systems.

More ways to stay in touch

Each year the FTTH Council Europe generates a huge amount of information and educational material in the form of press releases, market panorama and market forecasts, analyst studies on the benefits of FTTH, and much more. To help you stay better connected with us, we have recently joined Facebook and Twitter. You can use these channels to get instant updates from the Council including the latest news, publications, and events. We are also sharing photos and videos of our activities.

The Council already has a LinkedIn community with over 220 members, which has now been reactivated. Over the coming year we will be seeking the views of the FTTH community on issues ranging from the barriers to FTTH adoption to feedback on the Council's activities.

New publications! Read all about it!

This year the Council published its very first Annual Report, detailing the work and achievements in the year 2009-2010. One of the highlights of the year was the inaugural Innovation Awards competition, designed to reward innovators in the FTTH industry. By popular demand, we have published the FTTH Innovation Awards Compendium 2010, which details the top five entries in each of three categories. Another highlight was the European Market Forecast from analyst firm Heavy Reading, which details the expected adoption of FTTH in Europe from 2009 to 2020.

All of these publications are available to download free of charge:
